

Communications

Professors Narain Batra, Kenneth Bush, William Estill

The Communications Program provides a high-level, broad-based bachelor's degree in Communications as well as a minor in Communications. The career-oriented curriculum provides introductory and advanced writing, editing, and production experience in print, digital, and electronic media. The program is committed to freedom of expression, personal and professional fulfillment, intellectual development, and the fostering of ethical understanding and creative growth.

Goals:

To expand students' knowledge of the structure, history, and practices of the field of mass media, and provide them with the skill set necessary to enter the current employment market.

Outcomes:

Graduates will demonstrate:

- the knowledge and skills to write a balanced, thorough and incisive news or feature story for the Norwich University community by following established Associated Press style guidelines
- the knowledge and skills necessary for television production.
- understanding of various social media issues and agility with web-based presentations.
- knowledge of legal and ethical responsibilities of media professionals
